The Science of Horticultural Plants

Horticultural plants such as fruits, vegetables, and flowers are important plants that enrich our lives. We research them from production to storage in order to provide consumers with better horticultural plants.

To Grow Better Plants
To understand plant mechanisms

To Breed Better Plants
To develop energy-saving and cost-effective storage technology as an alternative to refrigeration storage.

To Deliver Better Plants

Recent Publications: